Chronic administration of haloperidol and clozapine produces hyperprolactinemia in rats. However, the role of dopamine (DA), serotonin (5-HT), corticosterone (B), or catecholamines (CA) in neuroleptic-induced hyperprolactinemia in rats is unknown. In this study we examined the role of these neurotransmitters and hormones in hyperprolactinemia by examining the effect of chronic administration of the DA antagonist pimozide, the 5-HT antagonists spiroxatrine and mianserin, the DA agonist rosiglitazone, and the antigluccorticosteroids dexamethasone and RU 28362 on serum prolactin (Prl). Daily administration of pimozide (1.5 mg/kg) for 7 days increased serum Prl, and a single administration of spiroxatrine (5 mg/kg) on day 7 decreased serum Prl to the control level in acutely prepared normal rats. In rats withdrawn from chronic pimozide for 7 days, spiroxatrine decreased serum Prl to the control level. In dopamine-depleted rats, rosiglitazone decreased serum Prl, but pimozide or spiroxatrine had no effect. In the rats withdrawn from chronic pimozide for 7 days, dexamethasone (1 mg/kg) or RU 28362 (10 mg/kg) decreased serum Prl to the control level. In summary, chronic pimozide induces hyperprolactinemia by acting on DA and possibly 5-HT neurons, and also on the adrenal glands, and chronic spiroxatrine or dexamethasone/RU 28362 decrease serum Prl in rats. Therefore, prolactin secretion in acute and chronically pimozide-treated rats is regulated by DA, 5-HT, B, and CA in the hypothalamus, pituitary, and adrenal glands.Borat At The Oscars The Baldwin brothers, Chris and 1cb139a0ed
