Ms Le Pen, who is the party's leader, said her strategy was to cut the number of seats in parliament to a level that would "lead to" the building of a majority government. She said the party, which is now the main opposition force in the National Assembly, will remain in government but change its policy. "We will not be in opposition if there is no majority in parliament, but we will change the strategy," said Ms Le Pen. She also said the party would cease some of its symbolic measures and make security a priority. "We will do more work on the grassroots," she added, although she did not give any more detail. She said she would cut the party's personnel costs by 20% and hire more staff to better prepare for parliamentary debates. "The FNE [Faction Nationale de l'Entreprise] – the entrepreneurial pillar of the FN [Front National] – is targeted at getting
