Efficacy of fish oil-based oral nutritional supplementation during radiotherapy for breast cancer patients: A randomized controlled trial. Radiotherapy is a standard treatment for breast cancer. It impairs immunity and causes changes in the lipid profile. Thus, it is necessary to protect cancer patients from the side effects of radiotherapy using oral nutritional supplementation. This study evaluated the effect of fish oil-based oral nutritional supplementation on radiation-induced oral mucositis and the lipid profile. A total of 90 patients with breast cancer participated in a randomized, controlled, double-blind study. They were assigned to one of three groups: an oral nutritional supplementation (ONS) group, or control (CON) or standard care (SAP) groups. For the ONS group, an oral nutritional supplement containing 30 g of fish oil and 1200 mg of vitamins daily was added to the participants' food. For the CON group, a standard diet was given. For the SAP group, patients received the recommended daily dose of vitamins according to their age. The incidence of oral mucositis, pain, and lipid profile were evaluated. The incidence of mucositis was 2.2, 15.2, and 5.7% in the ONS, CON, and SAP groups, respectively ($P=0.015$). In the ONS group, the incidence of grade

Why would I want to submit my app to the Windows Store when I can just upload it and let Windows Store do the heavy lifting? It seems like the same thing, and I can't find the submission page... A: You can also upload it directly to Windows Phone Store. There is no need for submission. A: You can certainly do this, although to be clear, Windows 8 has its own store, and Windows Phone has its own store. They are different application repositories, with different rules, restrictions, and even different SDKs. So submitting to the Windows Store also means submitting to the Windows Phone Store, and vice versa. For Windows Phone, you can also submit the.xap directly to the store.
