Some people refer to images that have been edited on Photoshop as having been "Photoshopped" or "Photoshopped up." This term has been commonly used for years. The Adobe JPEG file format The JPEG (pronounced "jay-pee") image file format is popular because JPEG files are small and easy to share over the Internet. In the early 1990s, the JPEG file format became popular as a way to make images smaller and less processor-intensive than the GIF format. During the mid-1990s, people realized that the JPEG format could be used as a method to encode digital images without increasing the image quality, producing smaller files than GIF or TIFF. The JPEG format became popular when people started creating and exchanging digital camera images, and because of the ease with which Photoshop could handle the format. JPEG compression is lossy, so although a JPEG file can contain a smaller file than a TIFF file of the same quality, the JPEG file quality may be poor. Many people have become accustomed to the JPEG file format's small size, so when you send an image to someone in e-mail, you know it's a JPEG file. You can often tell that an image file is a JPEG file because it ends in ".jpg" or ".JPG." The Adobe Photoshop file format The Adobe Photoshop file format also became popular as a way to make images smaller than TIFF or GIF. Adobe Photoshop uses the same RGB color space as the standard P3 color space, so images created in Photoshop can be viewed with any other color scheme. Photoshop is a bitmap editor that enables you to work with layers. Photoshop can help you create raster images (or pixels), raster vector images, or graphics that have been transformed into a raster image (often called vector images). The Photoshop file format has an eight-bit depth. It can hold much more color information than a GIF or TIFF file. However, the Photoshop file format can have a lesser quality than those formats. Photoshop maintains more quality because of the fact that the file is a compressed format (compared to the uncompressed form). The Photoshop plug-in structure The Adobe Photoshop application has an application programming interface (API) that enables third-party developers to create plug-ins and add-ons. A plug-in is a feature offered by Photoshop that lets you manipulate an image. The plug-in structure enables the making of effects and plug-

NBCSN has quickly become the go-to destination for fans in the Eastern Conference. Despite being only a couple of hours away from New York, the channel's content, presentation, and television consumption patterns are remarkably different than what one would experience in the City of Brotherly Love. An intimate connection, the news anchor chair, and rich visuals all contribute to NBCSN's East Coast-feel. The vibe is quite different than that of ESPN, and those traveling to or living in Philadelphia are often surprised to see the distinctive channel logo in their local cable provider. Matt Winer, a senior vice president at NBC Sports, and the network's chief content officer, discussed NBCSN's evolution and the network's role as the new face of the league on Tuesday's Digital Content NewFront. The new network will debut on Aug. 19 with a slate of over 100 games. NBCSN will showcase eight Saturday games, 16 Sunday games, and 14 Monday Night Football matchups. By comparison, ESPN's new Saturday games will air approximately 30. And though Fox will air fewer than NBC, its games will more than double in breadth. NBCSN's more intense schedule and its style of presentation will present fans a different, engaging experience. The network will feature more live games, more replays, and more on-camera talent. "Our new sports fans want to feel like they're part of the experience," Winer said. "And that's what we're offering. They want to feel as though they're there, they are the players and the coaches, as opposed to sitting in a studio at two in the morning." Dish Network's offerings in Philadelphia, meanwhile, are lacking in sports content. ESPN3 and ESPN2 are the only channels available in the area, and the channels' programming is not nearly as satisfying as NBCSN's offerings. NBCSN's rise in the Eastern Conference may be a result of the network's unique, focused approach to the Eastern Conference. The new network's content and television consumption patterns are clear indicators of the direction the league is moving in. Mark J. Rebilas/USA TODAY Sports "We're looking at this very different from ESPN," Winer said. "We're looking at this very different from the way we're looking at this with our national business. We have to be very clear and specific that this is going to happen in the East. So it's a different plan. It's a different way of being

What's New in the?

In his first-ever interviews, the sole Australian survivor of the Waco siege has revealed to 60 Minutes what really took place during the 51-day stand-off, and why he believes crazed cult leader David Koresh will one day return to Earth. Marcia Clark was a prosecutor who argued before a jury in the case against O.J. Simpson that got him off the hook for the murders of his ex-wife and her friend. She was also a mother who put her kids ahead of her own career, and who drank throughout the case. "I was a prosecutor on the Simpson case," Clark said during her trip to Sydney on The Today Show. "There was one time in the middle of a night when I was a mother and I felt so exposed. I asked [my son] what time it was," she said. "He said, 'Mom, it's 2:30'. And I said, 'Where are the guys? I could picture them out in the yard probably playing with their guns and killing animals.'" "And he said 'Oh, they're home.' They had changed the clocks." When quizzed about why she thinks Koresh was so compelled to bring his own people to the compound, she told The Today Show she believes the guru had an eye on the market. "I thought about times when I have been in trouble with the law," she said. "I was 23 at the time of the Simpson case. And I remember thinking that all that I'd learned [in law school] was not working. "I was living in a little town in Montana and my husband was in the Navy. I had this baby. You know, I was just making the best of a bad situation and in a moment of desperation I took a legal job. "It was a moment when I felt if I played my cards right, I could get out of that situation." But Clark has nothing but sympathy for those who were inspired by David Koresh to take part in the 1993 Waco raid. "It's really a crying shame that people listen to the way they do. But I don't have the answer for that. "I am sorry for them. I am sorry for the children that were hurt, the families that were hurt. I know what they went through."
