Now it appears that the final version of Edge has arrived and is available for Windows 10 computers in the Microsoft Store. This final version of Edge comes with a new tab called "Preview" that lets you see a browser version running inside the Microsoft Edge engine and not your computer. Preview works best when you move the mouse to the side of a computer screen to access the preview tab and not on the computer's taskbar. The new tab also appears when you long tap the "Windows" key from your keyboard. Like on the developer build, the Windows version of Microsoft Edge shows notifications by tapping the new "Message" icon on the panel that sits at the bottom of the browser. The Edge window offers to show you cards when you open any website with Microsoft Edge as your default browser, show up as a new tab when you open a new page, open a suggestion for a web page that's already on your Favorites, or when you open a web page in a private tab. Windows 10 isn't the only platform that Microsoft Edge works on. Microsoft also officially supports Edge for Android, macOS, iOS, Ubuntu, and Linux. It is less clear how many of these platforms will receive the final version of Edge. Some recent leaks claim the final version of Edge should arrive on macOS later this year. Edge includes features like tab grouping and multiple windows. However, in the beta, one of the most notable features of Edge was the support for Microsoft Solitaire Collection that was available to all Windows users and also worked in the Edge browser.Q: Changing the color of one row in a model, when different rows match the given condition using javascript I am trying to change the background color of a row in my asp.net mvc c# web application.
